

Volunteer Opportunities

The success of F.O.R.E.'s programming and outreach is dependent upon its volunteers. Are you interested in helping to make a difference in the lives of women currently or previously incarcerated in Lebanon County? Are you interested in helping your community thrive? If so, then please consider volunteering your time and/or services to F.O.R.E. The board is currently looking for individuals able to assist with fundraising and outreach. Also needed are facilitators for the Women's Intervention Group. For more information, visit lebanonfore.com or call the F.O.R.E. office via 717-273-9328.

Lifers by Artist Mary DeWitt

F.O.R.E. and the Lebanon Valley Council on the Arts will be presenting the exhibition "Lifers" starting August 7, 2015.

Philadelphia artist, Mary DeWitt portrays the many stories of women serving life sentences in prison. DeWitt's work is coming to the Lebanon Valley Council on the Arts and will be on exhibition for the entire month of August. The moving and captivating display of personal stories is worth a visit.

Whether you believe in the punitive measures surrounding life or death sentences or your views fall on the other side and included opportunities for commutations, the exhibition has the power to evolve your perspective.

F.O.R.E. President, Donna Gathright, first heard of DeWitt's work through another venue and knew immediately she had to find a way to bring the exhibit to Lebanon. "When you hear stories about children being hungry or women being abused, it's easy to immediately feel their pain and want to respond. When someone reads about a woman convicted of a crime and serving life in prison, most people think 'You got what you deserved.' What they don't realize is that when children are hungry, women are in abusive relationships and desperate, sometimes they commit crimes that have far-reaching impact. Not all of these women are faceless or voiceless; some of them are just like us."

The exhibit will be free and open to the public through the end of August. Hours will be posted on the F.O.R.E. website as well as the website for the Lebanon Valley Council on the Arts. An opening reception will be held on August 7, from 5-8pm.
